Reviews

A superior quality book along with the font employed was exciting to see. It is one of the most amazing book i have got read through. You wont really feel monotony at anytime of the time (that's what catalogs are for about in the event you ask me).

A Needy Field--Initial Arrangements by Mr. G. F. Angas--Adopted and Modified by Mr. J. H. Angas--Personal Contributions in all. 4,000--An Impulse to Local Efforts--The Annual Meeting--A Pathetic Resolution-- A Rich Man with Dignity of Heart. Forty years ago the most densely inhabited suburbs of Adelaide were between the city and the Port. The populous towns to the south and east are the product of a later period, but Hindmarsh and Bowden were places where families of the laboring classes mostly congregated, and there was a large proportion of the poor. From his town residence at Prospect Hall, Mr. G. F. Angas had a clear view of this locality, and its claims as a field for missionary and philanthropic effort were thus brought distinctly under his notice. The result was that in 1865 he practically constituted himself into a local Missionary Society for the district, appointed an agent for whose support he became responsible, and made him his almoner. The town missionary, Mr. Harkness, reported directly to Mr. Angas, who had the supervision of the work in his own hands. During the ten years that this arrangement continued it is understood that the total contributions of Mr. G. F. Angas amounted to about 2,500, and at the end of that time his health and strength having failed, he handed over the mission to the care of his son. A transaction of this kind is necessarily uncommon, and has features of...
