A prominent educator has recently said to me, in regard to the teaching of Mechanics, I am convinced that it is to be done more thoroughly in the future than in the past; and it will be done, he believes, by sticking close to elementary principles as developed by well-chosen practical problems. Furthermore, he adds, it will have to be recognized that all an engineering baccalaureate course can worthily accomplish is to give the raw recruit the setting-up exercises in Mechanics. It is now generally recognized, I think, that this subject should cover first of all the elements and fundamental principles that form the basis of every engineer s knowledge; that these necessary elements and principles are best understood and best remembered by actually solving numerous problems that present important facts illustrative of every-day engineering practice, and arouse the student s interest far better than abstract examples which can be easily formulated from imaginary conditions.
